TEXT 1: A CHEESE THAT TASTES OF FUTURE

- 1 Jordi Benages is a young shepherd in the small Spanish village of Xert who dreamed of reducing the environmental footprint
2 of cattle farming by making sheep's cheese with solar power. His dream began to take shape in his family farm after he got the 3 necessary financial support from a crowd-funding campaign on an internet-based platform specialized in projects that respect and 4 protect the environment.
5 The initial goal of the campaign was to raise €6,900 to buy and install solar equipment. But in just over a month it has raised 6 €7,200 from 148 sponsors. The donations are being rewarded with a wide range of prizes, including a day for two in the village to 7 experience the ins and outs of cattle farming, workshops on milking sheep and artisan cheese making, and a traditional local lunch
8 consisting of barbecued organic lamb. When asked why he resorted to crowdfunding, Jordi answers that he wanted young people
9 to become interested in farming. "It's profitable work that brings more pleasure than sacrifices", says Benages, who is more than 10 convinced that rural life and entrepreneurship are not mutually exclusive. Furthermore, he adds, it can provide a solution to Spain's 11 depopulation problem.
12 And then Benages is very concerned about the environment. He argues that small-scale family farming is necessary for 13 sustainable land management. Shepherding and livestock farming, he says, help to prevent fires and guarantee the biodiversity of 14 the land. He therefore warns that the importance of the traditional role of shepherd should not be underestimated.
15 From now on, Jordi's cheese will be the result not only of past wisdom but also of sustainable technology, which will reduce its 16 mark on the planet to its distinctive flavor.

TEXT 2: K(OREAN)-POP

- 1 Many Westerners who come to Korea quickly dismiss K-pop, Korea's mainstream music genre, as a sugar-coated excuse for 2 entertainment. They don't realize that K-pop is much bigger than skinny jeans and plastic faces. In fact, K-pop is transforming 3 Korea as the world knows it.
- 4 I should first mention that there is a dark side to K-pop. Performers begin training in their teenage years. Once they sign a 10-
5 to 15-year contract, artists move into company dormitories and all aspects of their lives are controlled by their managers. Even 6 after the performers become famous, they receive a minimal portion of the profits of their success. And then there are the more 7 overt problems, like the objectification of women.
- 8 That being said, there are some good things about K-pop. Contrary to popular belief, not all of it is mass-produced pop. There 9 are many K-pop singers who are actually very talented and would do well in any other musical genre. Lee Hi has been compared 10 to Adele, and can hit notes very few others her age are capable of. FT Island excels in playing guitars and drums, and Epik High 11 challenges the very meaning of K-pop with their funky and hip-hop roots.
- 12 Whether K-pop's popularity is related to talent or other reasons, the industry is boosting the Korean economy in more ways
13 than one. K-pop is quickly becoming one of the country's biggest exports ($500 million last year). Popular groups held world tours
14 spanning from Indonesia to Chile. And since Psy's "Gangnam Style" went viral, there has been a massive influx of tourists to Korea
15 as well as an increase in interest in Korean products and cuisine.
