TEENAGE FLASH MOB ROBBERIES ON THE RISE

- 1 The same technologies that for years have brought together the mostly benign and goofy ‘flash mobs,’ in which groups suddenly break into dance at a mall or wander around like zombies at train stations, is being used to plan and execute bold robberies.
- 5 Called ‘flash robs,’ these crimes are being organized by young teenagers through various social media outlets, most notably Twitter. Police say the suspects select a time and place and enter the store in droves taking what they want and leaving before security or police can catch them.
- 10 Some of the most brazen robberies take place in the light of day and on busy streets despite all the security cameras and the watchful eyes of workers. ‘Young people are risk takers; they do things in groups far more than adults do. A medium like Twitter plays into the characteristics of a young person’s behaviour,’ Scott Decker said.
- 15 The pack mentality allows the thieves to strike fast, so fast that the store clerks don’t have time to react.
- Technology hasn’t just made it easy to plan and organize; it’s allowed the thieves to off-load their goods. A recent survey done by a leading retail industry group shows that technology has led to a peak in organized crime, mostly as thieves find it easier to sell what has been stolen online.

CAFFEINE AND ALCOHOL POTENT MIX FOR YOUNG

1 Mixing alcohol and caffeine is hardly a new concept, but a series of cases involving students and others who were taken to hospitals after drinking beverages that combine the two in a single large can has alarmed college and health officials around the country. The drinks are dangerous, 5 doctors say, because the caffeine masks the effects of the alcohol, keeping consumers from realizing just how intoxicated they are.

A brand called Four Loko, a fruit-flavored malt beverage that has an alcohol content of 12 percent and as much caffeine as a cup of coffee, has been particularly criticized after students who drank it this fall at 10 Ramapo College in New Jersey ended up in emergency rooms, some with high levels of alcohol poisoning.

‘This is one of the most dangerous new alcohol mixtures I have ever seen,’ said an emergency room doctor at Lancaster General Hospital, who said he had treated more than a dozen teenagers and adults over the 15 last three months who had been brought there after drinking Four Loko. ‘It’s a recipe for disaster because your body’s natural defense is to get sleepy and not want to drink, but in this case you’re tricking the body with the caffeine.’
